Schedule a Batch File to run automatically

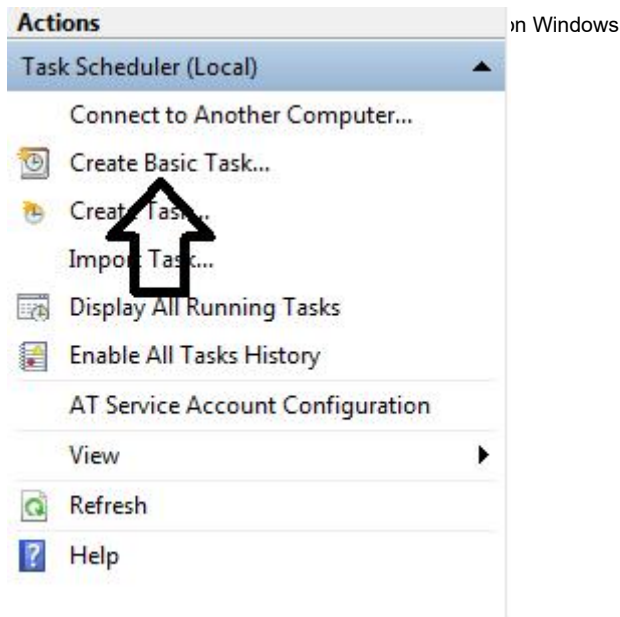

Step 1: Create a batch file you wish to run and place it under a folder where you have enough permissions. For example under C drive.

Step 2: Click on Start and under search, type in Task and click open Task Scheduler.

er path for backup tasks

tbinda • 4 years ago

out here is an example of a backup task put into a .BAT file:

::\BACKUPS /E /ZB /J /W:600 /MIR /XO /ETA

for the original files and E is the destination location)

all files from D:\DATA to E:\BACKUPS preserving (sub)folder structure and it will only iles.. so it won't copy over if files haven't been changed since last backup.

grub. Now, I'll just run a script at start up. There's three days I'll never get back.

file which has sqlcmd to execute a stored proc. If I run the batch file manually, it works as a task starts at scheduled time and completes successfully. The stored procedure is not run. Can

r\110\Tools\Binn\SQLCMD.EXE -E -S %DBSERVER% -d %DATABASE% -Q "SET NOCOUNT
'Q%\Reports\my_stored_proc_report.txt -s" " -W -k1 -u

quote when starting the exe. I would also write in a log command to output the program errors

I have a VBScript to disable NIC and a batch script to execute this VBScript, the batch script need to run CMD with admin privileges and executing the batch script, in turn the batch script will run the VBScript file. Please guide me where I'm going wrong

Unfortunately people are still seeing it.

I move one directory to another drive and directory every night. This is triggered by using task batch file that goes in and counts the files in each directory. I want to make sure any of the files are moved.

When I run the batch file, I get the correct amount of files in the %totalizer% directory. When I run the task scheduler, then the %totalizer% comes back 0 every time?

Any help would be appreciated? Batch File Below..., Thanks

I'm having a similar problem. It seems that this doesn't work well with environment variables and/or batch file variables.
